MSU Livestock Judging Camps

May 12-14, 2018 (Starts-1:00 p.m. May 12)

May 28-30, 2018 (Starts-1:00 p.m. May 28)

June 2, 2018 “Day Camp” for ALL AGES

I think it is always important to continue to introduce myself for the benefit of those I've not yet met in my time on faculty at Mississippi State University. I am an instructor in the Animal and Dairy Sciences Department and serve as the Livestock Judging Team Coach. I am a native of Danville, AL but my time on collegiate judging teams was spent in Kansas both at Butler Community College and Kansas State University. At K-State, I was a member of the 2006 Reserve National Champion Livestock Judging Team and served as the Assistant Coach of the 2008 Reserve National Champion Team while in graduate school at KSU. I then spent four years coaching at the junior college level at Seward County Community College in Southwest Kansas. However, the South has always been home, and building a successful program on my turf has always been my goal! Many of you know that we have re-established a livestock judging team here at MSU and actually have already notched a couple of contest wins since the revitalization of our program!

We are now offering two identical camps for older youth. As for our “Day Camps”, this year we will be offering two sessions of that camp also, but both will occur on the same day. You'll have your choice (on a first-come, first-served basis) of signing up for either the morning or afternoon session. Each session will be capped at a maximum of 50 participants. The material will obviously be condensed; however, this year we'll offer material suitable for BOTH ages 9-13 and 14-19. As in the past, adults who wish to go through the event must register and pay as well.

The “Day Camps” on June 2nd will offer different groups with varying depth of instruction to accommodate both our younger audience (Ages 9-13) and the older youth (Ages 14-19). Any adults who attend with youth, must go through the camp with the participants for whom they are responsible. These “Day Camps” will be conducted with an instructional method and level targeting the kids. Coaches will benefit by observing the teaching methods used on the kids. This should be a day filled with learning for the kids, and it should give coaches ideas and material to take home and develop these new skills in their students. The focus of these camps will be to develop an understanding of the basics of evaluation and judging as well as general note-taking methods. There will be NO actual delivery of reasons during these camps. Two different three-day camps will also be held May 12-14 as well as May 28-30 for older youth (ages 14 and up) and will entail a combination of classroom lectures, live animal evaluation on the farm, oral reasons and lab exercises.

Respectfully,

Brett Crow
